Focus on key business areas

Business Matters is the UK's largest distributed subscription-based monthly business magazine and website portal for the owners of small business and medium sized enterprises (SME's).

Business Matters is read for its news coverage, analysis, interviews with key opinion formers and leading entrepreneurs and opinion formers in the UK small and medium business sector.

Established in 1987, Business Matters reaches influential decision makers in the UK's thriving small and medium sized business sector. Addressing key issues, trends and developments.

Business Matters is highly regarded as the leading title for those involved in running their own business. This position was recognised and further enhanced with the title being selected by Team 2012, the SME support programme for athletes looking to form Team GB and participate in the London Olympics in 2012, as their 'Official Business Magazine'.

Targeting the largest business sector in the UK, a market worth an estimated £25 billion, Business Matters reaches decision makers in both the SME market and large blue chip organisations, with a spend ranging from £150,000 to more than £25 million per annum.

The monthly publication of the magazine offers a steady stream of practical proven ideas to help business owners and managers take short-cuts to success and drive their business success. The website offers rolling news.

Every edition features a profile of a successful entrepreneur to provide an insight into their business and the story of their success and also features regular columnist, Duncan Bannatyne – one of the UK's leading entrepreneur's and previously a star of TV's Dragons' Den, who shares his thoughts and ideas for business success.

Full cover featured interviews have included James Caan, Michelle Mone, Caprice, Lord Sugar, Peter Jones and Jaqueline Gold.

“Little wonder then, that Business Matters is the number one choice for the owners of SME businesses in the UK.”
